Forecast For The United Kingdom
Issued by Met Office Exeter
at 1600 on Tuesday 27 Apr 2021

++ Valid for broadcast between 1800 and 0600

Headline:
More unsettled, with some showers for many. Mostly rather chilly.

This Evening and Tonight:
Rain and showers moving southwards, perhaps heavy for parts of Wales and the west and southwest of England, although southeast England probably dry. Turning clearer across Scotland with patchy frost in shelter, but most other areas probably frost-free.

Wednesday:
Showery rain, heavy for some, affecting Wales and some central and western parts of England. Brighter elsewhere, though further showers for Scotland, wintry on hills. Feeling chilly for most.

Outlook for Thursday to Saturday:
Rain across the far southeast early on Thursday soon clearing. Otherwise a mixture of clear or sunny spells and showers. Temperatures well below average with some overnight frosts.
